EDITORIAL

The new editors continue to find their footings with the production of the newsletter. As we discover the permutations of forms and formats we ask our reader's patience. Personal News will continue to appear in our pages, but will now only come out twice yearly.

We also plan some new departures. In particular we anticipate approaching society members for short bibliographical examinations of issues or questions. Suggestions for themes, or volunteers for contributions are welcome. If in doubt, drop us a note with a statement of interest.

COUNCIL CORNER

ED Reed, President

The Council of the Society held its regular mid-winter meeting on 25 January. Among the many items of business that were discussed by Council were two that will be of particular interest to members of the Society - viz., annual conferences and the archival disposition of federal maritime records.

Work on the 1997, 1998 and 1999

Annual Conferences is underway, though each is, of course, at different stages in the organizational process. Council reviewed progress reports on the program and local arrangements for each of the Conferences, and the reports indicate that all three will be exciting and important events in the life of the Society.

The 1997 Annual Conference will be held in Saint John, New Brunswick, from Thursday, 29 May to Saturday, 31 May, and members will shortly be receiving, if they have not already received, copies of the program and registration package.

The theme of the 1997 Annual Conference is "Ports and People", and there will be six sessions on related topics. One session will be devoted exclusively to the Port of Saint John itself, while others will be on, for example, "Ports and Empire" and "Ports and Wrecks". Papers will be given both by members of the Society and by non-members, and one presenter will be coming from as far away as Turin, Italy. The program also includes a cruise of the harbour.

All in all, then, the 1997 Annual Conference promises to be one of the best ones yet - owing principally to the dedicated work of Bill Glover, Ann Martin and Bob Elliot - and I hope that as many members as possible, especially those in the Maritimes, will be able to attend.

The 1998 Annual Conference, to be held in Calgary, Alberta, over three days during June, is the most ambitious endeavour the Society has taken on recently, and it is certainly the largest conference that the Society has planned on its own.

Chris Archer and his colleagues in the Department of History at the University of Calgary have been beavering away at the program and local arrangements for the 1998 Annual Conference since September, and every thing in the progress report that was presented to Council at its mid-winter meeting suggests that the Conference will, indeed, be a "blockbuster".

The tentative theme of the 1998 Annual Conference is "Naval War, Exploration, and Societies at Sea", with proposed sessions on such topics as maritime medicine, sovereignty and environment, mutinies and piracy, and literature and the sea. Some sessions will be held concurrently, and there will also be several plenary sessions. For the latter, the Organizing Committee is planning to invite a number of scholars with international reputations. On the social side, the Committee has several field trips in mind - white-water rafting, a tour of Banff and Lake Louise, and a visit to a working ranch.

The 1999 Annual Conference, to be held in Corner Brook, Newfoundland, probably during August, is only in the preliminary stages of the organizational process. The Conference will be held jointly with the Association for the History of the Northern Seas and is being organized by Olaf Janzen, who is a member of both groups. The program will consist of both separate and joint sessions and might also include a field trip to L'Anse aux Meadows and Red Bay.

Considerable concern was expressed by members of the Society and others at the Annual Meeting last year about the disposition of records of the federal government that relate to maritime issues as the government proceeds with its downsizing initiative. Accordingly, I wrote to the National Archivist, Dr. Jean-Pierre Wallot, to ascertain how the National Archives of Canada intends to appraise the records of Transport Canada, Ports Canada, Revenue Canada - Customs, and related maritime agencies that do create records that are subject to the National Archives of Canada Act. In particular, the letter asked, first, about the criteria that are being used by the National Archives to approach records of "national significance" in the instances of records created in Ottawa, at regional offices and at various sites and, second, about classes of records and subject areas that are represented in the records of the various federal maritime agencies that will not be acquired by the National Archives as a result of the appraisal process.

The reply that I received from Dr. Wallot was considered by Council at its mid-winter meeting. The general feeling of Council was that Dr. Wallot's reply, though prompt and courteous, was not very informative and was, therefore, unlikely to provide members of the Society and other nautical researchers with much concrete reassurance.

ICMH NEWS

By Lewis R. Fischer

One of the greatest advantages of being a member of CNRS is that it brings with it the membership in the International Commission for Maritime History. Although it might sound clichéd, this makes us all part of a vast international fellowship of like-minded individuals. Indeed, all of the constituent national commissions extend warm invitations to CNRS members who happen to be visiting abroad to participate in their various events.

In the last issue I told you a bit about the British Commission. In this column I would like to discuss the work of the Australian Commission. The Australian Association for Maritime History (AAMH) is in many ways quite similar to CNRS. Founded about five years earlier, the AAMH membership spans an entire continent. Indeed, a growing part of its constituency is abroad, just like CNRS. The Association also publishes a quarterly newsletter and a semi-annual journal, THE GREAT CIRCLE.

The AAMH Newsletter, currently edited by Jeffrey Mellefont, contains a variety of features quite similar to those in ARGONAUTA. But in addition, it contains a "maritime queries" section that is one of the best in the world. The Newsletter also regularly runs special features. Perhaps the most successful in recent memory was a series on the minor ports of Australia; many of the columns were eventually published by the AAMH as a book to commemorate its tenth anniversary.

THE GREAT CIRCLE was in many ways a model for THE NORTHERN MARINER/LE MARIN DU NORD. It is currently edited by Graydon Henning, who is also a member of CNRS. While the focus tends to be on Australia and adjacent regions, it has begun to encompass a much greater range in recent years. The latest issue, for example, contains essays on "ceremonies at sea" in 16th- and 17th-century Genoa; the Royal Navy and the South Sea labour trade in the 19th century; port competition in Nigeria around the turn of the century; and the problems of modern naval history.

Membership in the AAMH costs a reasonable AUS $30 (plus $5 per year for airmail, if required), and brings with it the newsletter and THE GREAT CIRCLE. If you would like to join, simply contact the Treasurer, Peter Ridgway, 19 Connaught St., Forrestfield, WA 6058, AUSTRALIA.

ARGONAUTA COMMENTARY

The Elsie Newsletter, published quarterly by the United States Navy Landing Craft Infantry National Association--A Review.

by John Crosse

Victory in the Second World War came by invasion. It was the countries who could land an army on a heavily fortified enemy coastline who prevailed. Normandy, North Africa, Sicily, Salerno, and the South of France, the innumerable landings on the islands of the Western Pacific, wherever U.S. or allied forces went ashore. In the long run it was these landings that sealed the fate of the Axis powers. Neither Germany, Italy or Japan had an answer to these massive assaults on their beaches.

It is therefore more than surprising that so few books have been written about the actual vessels that made these landings. We know the history of every battleship that ever floated. Tales innumerable have been written of corvettes in the Atlantic, destroyers on escort duty, heroic carrier pilots. But the small craft, in their thousands, that landed the infantry on the beaches, go virtually totally unrecorded. After all they weren't really ships. If they did have a name they were probably a converted merchantman, and if they had only a number it was difficult to be interested in them.

Unfortunately numbers do count. Total all the seamen who spent their war years in landing craft and other types of landing vessels and it adds up to a mighty figure, more than all those who fought at Jutland, greater than any of the innumerable infantry divisions they put ashore. It is sad indeed that the tales of all these vessels have gone unrecorded.

Fortunately, when the USS LCI National Association was formed in 1991, a retired Master Chief Gunner's Mate, Robert Kirsch, volunteered to handle the newsletter. In six years it has grown from a single typewritten sheet to a printed and well illustrated periodical.

Because it is essentially a seaman's magazine, it has gone through many name changes, and the latest is probably not the last. But basically it binds together the men of the many allied navies who served in one of the innumerable types of landing vessel that were developed during World War II, the 'Landing Craft Infantry (Large)', better known as the LCI(L), over a thousand of which were built in the United States to a design conceived by British Combined Ops'. The United Kingdom, having a head start in the development of specialised beach assault vessels, but lacking the shipbuilding capacity, sent a team to Washington, and BURSHIPS took it from there, developing a craft originally designed for inshore work, that proved so seaworthy that by the war's end they were to be found in every corner of the globe.

LCI(L)s proved so adaptable that many were converted to carry batteries of rockets, mortars, anti-aircraft guns or close inshore-support weapons, or serve as repair ships, headquarter ships or hospitals.

Little must Bob Kirsch have known what he had started! Tales innumerable, never before told, from ordinary seamen to grey-bearded admirals continue to flow in. They tell of such an incredible variety of experiences that even the men who manned them in battle had little idea of their usefulness, let alone the innumerable corners of the globe they arrived at. With a full complement of 25 officers and men, virtually none of whom had ever been to sea in their lives before, it was not unnatural that they got into some extraordinary scrapes.

But what is so strange, more than half a century after the end of hostilities, is that these newsletters reveal first hand accounts of the war at sea never known before. The young men who manned these craft had received only a basic training, they hardly knew bow from stern. Not for them the pusser navy of proper ships, these were pure amateurs, where else can you read of the completely green landing craft crew who lost their way crossing the Atlantic and ended up in the Azores. They had no Portuguese currency so they raided the Monopoly board and went ashore. The friendly islanders were only too happy to accept the phoney bills to give all that Jolly Jack could desire.

Tale after tale unfolds within these pages. For just a $10 annual subscription you can receive the newsletter. Write - USS LCI National Association, 643 Callery Road, Evans City, PA 16033, phone (412) 538-8151.

At least 30 Canadian LCI(L)s took part in the Normandy invasion. What have we ever heard of them or of the very many other types of landing craft manned by Canadians? And how about those other landings in which Canadian assault craft took part?

LURCHER # 4

by R. F. Latimer

The year was 1903 when a decision was finalized to station a Light-vessel as a navigational aid to the approaches to the Bay of Fundy. Specifications for the intended lightship were, length 112 feet, steel construction, schooner-type version having twin masts supported by jury-rig fore and aft sails, a small steam propulsion unit, oversize mushroom anchors, stud-link chain that led into a hawsepipe that merged into the upper stem, an occulting light visible thirteen-miles from all approaches and supported by a steam whistle. The builder was the Polson Yard in Toronto and the vessel was placed on station during the month of February, 1904.

The last Lurcher # 4 lightship, 128 feet in length, built at Kingston, Ontario in 1959, was fully equipped as an aids to navigation station, including wireless, and was propelled by a diesel engine of some 500 horsepower.

As lightships were becoming extinct in Canada, in favour of offshore towers and electronically equipped buoys, Lurcher # 4 was removed from station in 1977, renamed "Mikula" and converted to a Coast Guard cadet training ship which was based in the Sydney, Cape Breton area.

In 1994 'Mikula' was declared surplus to requirement and sold to Newfoundland interest where she languished until September, 1995, when sold to a Mr. Grimme of Pompano Beach, Florida.

Renamed 'Kormoran' after a World-War II German surface raider and registered in Belize, she sailed under her own power from Lewisporte to Port Everglades, arriving on 10th October 1995.

Enroute 'Kormoran' made an overnight stop at Yarmouth, not far from isolated Lurcher Shoal that she had fervently guarded for so many years.

The name 'Mikula' was once carried by an historic icebreaker of the 1920s to mid-30s era, which was well known in the Strait of Canso area. After she was scrapped in Liverpool, Nova Scotia in 1937, the name was struck from the registry and remained unused until its reactivation for Lurcher in 1977. Lurcher/ Mikula/ Kormoran, Mr. Grimme's newly acquired toy, is slated for conversion to a fine yacht. Incidentally, the vessel's holding company is appropriately named "Lighthouse Maritime Inc."

SAILING THE INTERNET

Carla Morse, the curator of the H.M.C.S. HAIDA Naval Museum is very pleased to announce the launch of its very own web-page thanks to the dedication and hard work of volunteer Jerry Proc.

H.M.C.S. HAIDA is the last remaining Tribal Class destroyer in the world and is located in Toronto, at Ontario Place. She saw service in WWII and the Korean War and has a very distinguished career as Canada's most famous warship.

When you visit <http://www3.sympatico.ca/hrc/haida> you will learn of her proud history, have the opportunity to take a virtual tour, view photographs of yesterday and today and much more.

USN Naval Historical Center is now on line at <http://www.history.navy.mil>.

USN Department Library catalog is accessible on the Internet, via the USN Historical Center's homepage or directly at the WWW location, <http://navy.library.net>

THE PERIODICAL LITERATURE

by Olaf U. Janzen

Many articles on maritime topics appear in journals that are not specifically dedicated to maritime themes. For instance, Bruce S. Elliott writes about nineteenth-century "English Migration to Prince Edward Island, Part One" in THE ISLAND, No. 40 (Fall/Winter 1996), pp. 3-11. Mario Mimeault examines changes within the cod-fishery in the Bay of Gaspé during the late eighteenth and early nineteenth century in "Le capital industriel des pêches dans la baie de Gaspé de 1760 à 1866." The article appeared in ACADIENSIS 25, No. 1 (Autumn 1995), pp. 33-53. Allan J. MacRae examines the history of a Prince Edward Island song based on an 1893 shipwreck in "A Song for the Gracie M. Parker," THE ISLAND, No. 40 (Fall/Winter 1996), pp. 17-20. Using letters and other sources, Boyd Beck recreates the life of a nineteenth-century British mariner in "Terror of the Western Ocean: The Adventures of Rory Long Donald," in THE ISLAND, No. 40 (Fall/Winter 1996), 21-7. James K. Hiller contributed a research note entitled "The 1904 Anglo-French Newfoundland Fisheries Convention: Another Look" which also appeared in ACADIENSIS 25, No. 1 (Autumn 1995), pp. 82-98.

Vivian L. Forbes is the author of "Defining A Maritime Boundary: The Christmas Island Example," which appeared in THE INDIAN OCEAN REVIEW 9, No. 3 (September 1996), pp. 12-16. Charles Dortch examined "First Voyages to Australia and Melanesia," also in THE INDIAN OCEAN REVIEW 9, No. 3 (September 1996), pp. 22-3. "Letters and documents relating to the service of Nelson's ships, 1780-1805: a critical report" by P.K. Crimmin appeared in HISTORICAL RESEARCH 70, No. 171 (February 1997), pp. 52-69. The article uses fifteen volumes of documents in the Library of the Wellcome Institute to examine the administration of the British Mediterranean fleet, 1796-8 and 1803-5. David Syrett is the author of "Prelude to Victory: the Battle for Convoy HX 231, 4-7 April 1943," also in HISTORICAL RESEARCH 70, No. 171 (February 1997), pp. 99-109. Galen Roger Perras is the author of "We Have Opened the Door to Tokyo: United States Plans to Seize the Kurile Islands, 1943-1945," JOURNAL OF MILITARY HISTORY LXI, No. 1 (January 1997), 65-91.

HCMS HAIDA

The future of H.M.C.S. HAIDA, the world's last Tribal Class Destroyer, is in jeopardy. In its current budget negotiations with the Management Board of Ontario, Ontario Place Corporation has threatened to seriously reduce and perhaps cut funding for one of its most visible attractions, H.M.C.S. HAIDA.

The ship was saved in 1964 by a group of proud Toronto businessmen who purchased it from Crown Assets and operated it as a museum on Toronto's harbour until 1970. When plans were being made to build Ontario Place, the provincial government purchased the ship and made it a feature attraction of the newly developed theme park. As part of the agreement, the government accepted responsibility for the maintenance of the ship as a naval museum and maritime memorial.

The ship has been recognized by the National Historic Sites and Monuments Board and designated as an important and valuable part of Canadian heritage. Canada's navy came of age during WWII and HAIDA was an important part of that transformation. The only Canadian naval monuments to have survived the scrap heap are HMCS HAIDA and HMCS SACKVILLE in Halifax. If allowed to waste away they will never come back. A renewal of funding will not reverse the effects of time and the elements. HAIDA must be maintained, even on a very basic level and cannot be neglected now. She has come through far too much.

It is vitally important that efforts are made now to show Ontario Place management that HAIDA cannot and will not survive their neglect. Everyone is being encouraged to visit the ship and take advantage of the opportunity to walk her decks and experience the "feel" of a WWII destroyer. If you are going to be in Toronto this summer, please visit. The ship is open May 16 - September 1 10:00am - 7:00pm daily. For more information, please visit our website <http://www3.sympatico.ca/hrc/haida>. If you are unable to visit the ship, please make your voice heard by contacting Max Beck, General Manager of Ontario
